

RUSSIAN MAIL TRAIN HELD UP.

REVOLUTIONISTS GET AWAY WITH 21,000 RUBLES.

Money Belonged to Government—One Soldier Killed and Three Wounded—Swiftness With Which Robbers Worked—Lost Carried Away in Saddle Bags.

From THE SUN Correspondent at St. Petersburg.
ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 13.—Passengers across the Transiberian Railroad who have arrived here bring full accounts of the seizure by revolutionaries of a mail train with a quarter of a million rubles of government money near Ufa. They say that when the train was approaching the aqueduct bridge on the night of October 4, it was suddenly stopped and the passengers supposed that soldiers were entering the train to escort it across the bridge.

"Suddenly," says one traveller, "we heard a violent noise from a second class carriage, which was occupied by six Government messengers armed with rifles, who were guarding a number of iron-bound boxes. A few seconds later came revolver shots and men sprang on the train. A soldier turned his bayonet on the first assailant, who stopped aside, seized the rifle barrel, turned the bayonet upward and shot the soldier dead. The next moment two other soldiers were wounded and bound. Several men wearing masks sprang on the train, swiftly disarmed the passengers who carried revolvers, and bound the Government messengers. Then they took the keys and the iron-bound money boxes."

"The passengers were amazed at the swiftness with which the men worked. In obedience to their leader, who gave his orders through a speaking trumpet, the boxes were emptied, near the side of the railroad, of the money bags. The bags were then tied to the saddles of horses which the assailants had near by.

"One Government messenger pleaded that his own 400 rubles in a strong box which he had been protecting be returned to him. The leader told him to leave his name and the money would be sent to him at Ufa."

"While the unloading of the boxes was proceeding some of the passengers crept along the corridor and asked the engine driver to steam ahead. The only reply was a voice through the speaking trumpet shouting, 'Everybody keep inside.' Then volleys from revolvers were fired on the locomotive and first carriage, and there was an explosion of bombs while the tender and train remained still, and the passengers were kept in their places for half an hour.

"Meanwhile the transfer of the boxes to the saddlebags was finished and the captain's voice was heard calling, 'report casualties.' The reply was, 'One killed, three wounded.' 'Sorry,' responded the captain.

"Bandages and surgical dressings were placed alongside the wounded aboard the train and the assailants, who numbered thirty, drove off in the darkness with 21,000 rubles.

"The blunders of the cadet leaders are giving Premier Stolypin's Ministry strength which its own achievements could not acquire. The Heligings Congress, which is described even by friendly witnesses as a continuous display of petty cleverness, arrived at a long-winded conclusion from which it was supposed could keep all shades of liberal opinion within the party organization. Stripped of verbiage, it did not make their refusal effective. They contented themselves with declaring for a continuance of the educational propaganda.

Premier Stolypin has promptly done what he warned the Government he would do if the Congress reaffirmed the Wiborg manifesto in any shape. The Ministry of Justice has instituted prosecutions against each member of the Heligings Congress who signed the Wiborg manifesto, which means that none of them will be eligible as candidates at the next election to the Duma.

Their humiliation has been made worse by what most Russians regard as a fiasco of the proposed visit of the delegation from England. The only usefulness of this delegation to the reform agitation would be in giving the reformers an opportunity to hold public meetings which political parties are not allowed to hold. When it is explained that the visit was abandoned because the mission had no intention of identifying itself with any particular party, but only with the Duma as an institution, the Russians remain unconvinced. They see only another display of successful masterfulness on the part of Premier Stolypin.

TAX COLLECTORS ROUTED.

Peasants Turn on Russian Police and Disarm Them—Service of Thankgiving.

From THE SUN Correspondent at St. Petersburg.
ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 13.—From Viatka province comes an account of the peasants' resistance, which has rendered the Russian almost hopeless in many agrarian provinces. In spite of the urgent appeals of Premier Stolypin and M. Kokotzev, the Minister of Finance, to secure the assessments due the imperial treasury, out of twenty-two communes in the Urym district only one has paid taxes.

Prince Gortchakoff, the Governor of Viatka, ordered the captain of police to gather the taxes at all costs. The captain, escorted by mounted and foot police, arrived at the first village and took the peasants unawares. He ordered the police to carry off the peasants' belongings as they refused to pay the taxes. On reaching the next village the police were met by peasants who had assembled from other villages and who refused to pay their taxes or to allow their belongings to be taken away.

The captain remained over night in the village and in the morning tried to persuade the peasants to pay, but was met by still greater numbers from neighboring villages who declared they would not pay. The captain in a rage ordered the police to shoot "these swine." The police fired and wounded three of the peasants and disarmed the police, fifteen of whom discarded their uniforms and refused to serve any longer. The captain and the other members of the police force fled after being beaten. The peasants then restored what had been taken from the first village and even forced the local authorities to pay for what had been damaged.

The police on their way home met some soldiers who were coming to their rescue, but the captain ordered them to return to town, confessing that nothing could be done with the peasants. The latter went to the home of the village priest, whom they disliked for the conservative opinions he had expressed in his sermons, and forced him to go to church and utter up thanksgiving for the victory of the peasants over the police.

LAST OF THE GATTIS DEAD.

They Were Famous Restaurant Keepers and Theatre Managers in London.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—Stefano Gatti, the millionaire restaurateur and theatre manager, who died yesterday at the age of 64, came to London in the '60s with his brother Agostino. They worked as waiters for their uncle, who kept a little cafe near Charing Cross and sold coffee and loaves. After a while Stefano suggested that they should sell steaks, chops and potatoes, and have a band play while the people ate.

This was done, and for the first time in London people dined to music in a public restaurant. When the brothers moved to the now famous Adelaide Gallery in 1882 the vicar of the neighboring church of St. Martin's was horrified at the thought of a band playing in the restaurant, and his efforts resulted in the band being discharged.

When the Adelaide Gallery was opened London hotels did not allow non-residents to dine or lunch in their gloomy coffee rooms, and people had to go to dingy coffee houses or equally dingy chop houses, which were divided into pewlike cubicles, while the floors were covered with sawdust. The gallery was without partitions and had marble top tables and plush covered benches, which were regarded as a miracle of luxury.

The Gallery flourished and in 1888 the brothers started on their theatrical career and achieved an immediate success. Here, too, they made a record by being the first managers to prohibit young men about town from going on the stage during a performance. On one occasion an Earl made a disturbance at Covent Garden because he was not allowed to use a pass door between the auditorium and the stage and was promptly ejected from the building. A few years ago this same Earl met Stefano Gatti and thanked him for having saved his reputation and his money.

Gatti was among the first to introduce the electric light in a London resort, setting up a plant to illuminate the Gallery as an extra attachment. That plant is now an electric supply company with a capital of £1,300,000.

Both brothers retained their affection for their native Switzerland and both had been elected members of the House of Assembly. Both died leaving fortunes far in excess of £1,000,000.

SOCIALISTS READY FOR FIGHT.

They Frankly Accept the Challenge Given by the Liberal Leaders.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The declaration of war upon Socialists made in Scotland last week by official Liberals has been followed by the frank acceptance of the challenge by the former. There is considerable regret among the Liberals that Secretary of War Haldane and the Liberal whips should have acted as they did. There are Liberals who fear the appearance of a rift in the party and would be glad to retain Laborites of all shades of opinion within the Liberal party, thinking no doubt that the party would be able to restrain the wilder longings of the avowed Socialists and bring their dreams of a more radical practical parliamentary action.

The Conservatives, who rejoice at anything that may prove embarrassing to the Government, are endeavoring to accentuate the quarrel as much as possible. They point out that socialism must be faced and fought because it is insidiously aggressive and perilously strong.

It is a Liberal body, including Conservatives and Liberals, whose opinion is voiced by the Spectator, which to-day acknowledges that to imagine that liberalism and socialism can ever be two names for the same thing is a dangerous delusion, but goes on to deny that socialism is a real danger in England, as the British workingmen, it says, are so well informed on the subject. Plain talking and open discussion will, it is urged, be sufficient to expose political fallacies such as those put forth by certain labor leaders.

Meanwhile the Socialists themselves are proceeding with an active campaign, the first object of which is to capture the trade unions. At a great Socialist demonstration in Heligings hall last night speakers advocated socialism against the world were made by several speakers.

"We welcome antagonism, and we place ourselves in active antagonism to the Liberal party because the sentiment of democracy is social not political freedom," declared one speaker. "We must grapple with the problem of poverty; liberalism is a bigger cause of poverty than drink," said another.

CURED OF AGORAPHOBIA.

Patient Got Better When His Daughter Ran Away with a Married Man.

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The Lancet publishes a description by Dr. Mercier, a famous physician on mental diseases, of how a patient was cured of agoraphobia, a rare disease which is seldom cured. It is a nerve disease of the class right speech craves to be near some tall vertical structure. When away from such a structure he has a feeling of "dread of impending danger in going to and from his office."

The patient treated by Dr. Mercier would sneak through all the alleys, courts and narrow streets he could use. When he came to a wide street he was seized with a real panic and he had to take a bus. If it was not very wide he might get through by holding on to a cart. Bridges were quite impassable to him. If he were compelled to go over a bridge he had to get into a bus some time before he reached it and keep his eyes shut while he crossed.

For his disease Dr. Mercier found no cure, but the man's daughter finally cured him. She ran away with a married man to whom she was completely cured the disease and it is the only case of a complete cure that Dr. Mercier has ever known of.

The Weather.

The area of high pressure was central on the New England coast yesterday, overpressing all sections east of the Mississippi River, and excepting parts of New England, New York and Pennsylvania the temperatures were generally higher.

Freezing weather was reported from parts of New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Virginia and North Carolina and there were frosts in the Middle and North Atlantic States.

The low pressures central over North Dakota and Minnesota and western Texas caused cloudy weather, but slight precipitation in the central regions and warmer weather from the western Mississippi Valley district to the western borders of the Atlantic States.

In the extreme West the temperatures were lower and the pressure was high. In this city the day was fair and warmer; wind, light to fresh northeast; average humidity, 52 per cent; barometer, corrected to read to sea level, at 8 A. M., 30.52; 3 P. M., 30.34.

The temperature yesterday as recorded by the official thermometer is shown in the annexed table:

WASHINGTON FORECAST FOR TO-DAY AND TO-MORROW.
For eastern New York, New England and eastern Pennsylvania, fair to-day and to-morrow; steady rising temperature; light south winds.
For New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, the District of Columbia and Virginia, fair and warmer to-day and to-morrow; variable winds, becoming south and light to fresh.

For western Pennsylvania and western New York, fair to-day and to-morrow; fresh south winds.

LONDON'S LORD MAYOR IN PARIS

FRENCH CAPITAL IS LOOKING FORWARD TO GORGEOUS DISPLAY.

The Mayor and Members of the Corporation Who Accompany Him Will Wear All the Trappings of Their Offices—Ten Mayors Suspended—Celt Cemetery Uncarried.

From THE SUN Correspondent at Paris.

PARIS, Oct. 13.—The nearest thing to excitement this week has been wholly prospective and centres in the spectacular visit of London's Lord Mayor and members of the Corporation, who are to be entertained by the Paris municipal authorities. The Londoners arrived to-night, but will not become guests of the city till Monday, the reason being, as the Paris papers are careful to say, the stringent observance of dominical repose which characterizes the English and which the visitors wish to observe here as at home.

So to-morrow the visitors will go to church, but on Monday Paris expects to see a gorgeous spectacle both in the streets and at official functions, as the Englishmen have brought brilliant trappings and the arrangements provide for their liberal display.

The Lord Mayor's coach, which arrived ahead of him, has been pictured in the papers, even while being cleaned. Parisians have been informed that every member of the Corporation would bring bombazine and a fur gown, and the Aldermen their scarlet robes.

In contrast to all this splendor the Paris officials are to appear in republican simplicity of dress, not because they are not entitled to uniforms, it is explained, but because the municipal councillors never had uniforms made. The Hotel de Ville has been adorned with a wonderful profusion of plants against a red velvet background, with the arms of London done in electric lights.

The visit is one of the manifestations of the entente between the two countries which is now engaging the attention of both official and commercial classes in England and France. How sincerely Paris is responding to this, was shown in an unexpected quarter last evening, when the bakers, who had been determined to make Paris eat stale bread on Mondays owing to their dislike of the terms of the weekly repose law, resolved to open as usual next Monday, the reason given being the desire to have the English visitors enjoy the best bread.

The Prefect of the Seine Inférieure has suspended ten Mayors for replacing in the public schools religious emblems which had been removed in accordance with the provisions of the associations law.

A prehistoric Celt cemetery has been discovered on the Isle of Batz. The tombs, which are of dressed granite, contained amulets, drinking cups and arrowheads. There were indications that the Celts practiced incineration and then entombed the ashes.

The French editors take the Kaiser's fury over the publication of the memoirs of the late Prince von Hohenlohe in regard to the differences between Prince Bismarck and Emperor William rather easily. The St. Louis remarks that though the Kaiser is somewhat compromised, he would make an admirable journalist.

The Petit Parisien takes occasion to say rather pointedly in commenting on the German Foreign Minister's coming visit to Rome: "The Italians and the French have cordially grasped one another's hands and have become friends again."

Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.

LONDON, Oct. 13.—The custom of hiring messenger boys to keep places in line outside the pit and gallery doors of London theatres has been steadily increasing. So, too, has the opposition of a considerable section of the public to the custom. (George Edwardes announces his intention on the

PRINCE ARTHUR ENGAGED.
The Report is That He Will Marry Lady Marjorie Manners.
Special Cable Dispatch to THE SUN.
LONDON, Oct. 13.—Court society circles are discussing with interest a report, which is believed to be well founded, that Prince Arthur of Connaught is engaged to Lady Marjorie Manners, daughter of the Duke of Rutland. For the last few years the Prince has represented royalty on many occasions and is well known and popular in many countries.

It is believed the Duke of Connaught originally opposed the match, but the King favored the chance of Prince Arthur succeeding to the throne, which might at one time have been considered a fair possibility, but the growing nursery of the Prince of Wales has now made it a remote chance and has removed the necessity of Prince Arthur having a royal bride.
